

Andy Duncan

Andy Duncan is an independent educational consultant within the finance industry, who specialises in the teaching of specialised quantitative derivatives skills to Front Office trading staff within the world of Investment Banking.

Regular clients include Barclays Capital, Deutsche Bank, HSBC, JP Morgan Goldman Sachs, Royal Bank of Scotland, and Credit Suisse, plus many of the other major players within the Investment Banking world. As well as teaching derivatives skills, Andy also lectures and coaches individuals on how to pass various high-level regulatory financial exams, including programmes such as the CFA (Chartered Financial Analyst), CQF (Certificate of Quantitative Finance), CISI (Chartered Institute for Securities & Investment), IMC (Investment Management Certificate), IOC (Investment Operations Certificate), and PCIAM (Private Client Investment Advice and Management).

Andy works regularly within the City of London, with occasional trips to New York, Dubai, Sydney, and Singapore.

With a deep knowledge of Austrian Economics, Andy also writes regular detailed book reviews for the Ludwig von Mises Institute in the United States, and the Cobden Centre in the United Kingdom. As such he frequently meets and speaks with many of the leading experts within Austrian Economics, and other related fields, including Professor Guido Hülsmann, Professor David Howden, Professor Philipp Bagus, Professor Kevin Dowd, Professor Mark Thornton, Professor Jesus Huerta de Soto, Professor Gerard Casey, and Professor Hans-Hermann Hoppe. He records many of these conversations and broadcasts them via podcast, on Cobden Centre Radio, for an international audience.
